

SAKAI AND BERKELEY SYMBOLIZED —

Hitoshi Yoshikawa, left, the counterpart in Sakai, Japan, to Berkeley Mayor Warren Widener, right, pause during a busy goodwill tour by 18 civic officials from Sakai to consider the common goals of the two sister cities. The locale of their brief moment of reflection is the impressive sun dial at the foot of the Berkeley Fishing Pier, a symbol of the friendship and mutual understanding reached by the Berkeley-Sakai affiliation. Yoshikawa is the chairman of the Sakai City Assembly, the Sakai equivalent of the city council here. He heads the 18-member delegation visiting Berkeley and other American cities on a whirlwind goodwill tour. The group will be feted at a "Sayonara" dinner tonight, then head for Los Angeles, Las Vegas, the Grand Canyon and Honolulu before returning to Tokyo July 30. While here, the delegation visited public libraries, the city hall complex, the University of California campus, YMCA and Boy Scout facilities, Hink's Department Store, and private homes. Their hosts for the visit have been members of the Berkeley-Sakai Assn.
